

The Fifth Anniversary of Ciencia Puerto Rico: Five years promoting science and research in our archipelago ^[1]

Submitted by Marcos Lopez ^[2] on 1 October 2011 - 12:00am

^[2]

^[3]

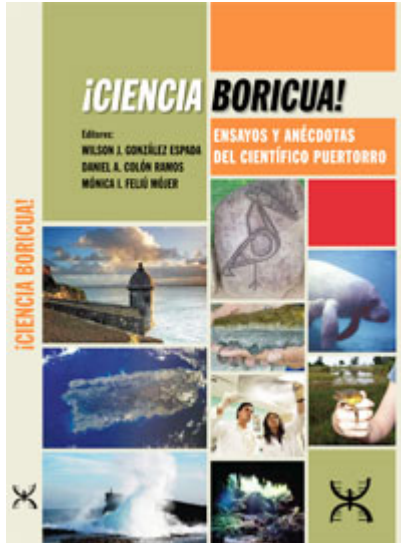

CienciaPR website throughout time. March, 2006 (left). Right, August, 2011

CienciaPR.org ^[4] was established in 2006 with the mission of providing a site in where the members of the scattered Puerto Rican scientific community could have a meeting point. Thanks to the support of thousands of users and a dedicated group of volunteer scientists ^[5], in five years, CienciaPR have exceeded the initial expectations becoming one of the scientific portals of more coverage in Puerto Rico and Latin America.

Nowadays, we count with more than 5,300 members, among which we have scientists, students and professionals and teachers from Puerto Rico, USA and more than 25 countries. The common connections that unifies us together are an interest for Puerto Rico and science. Thanks to these interests, CienciaPR and its members have been able to publish and disseminate hundreds of scientific news to the media, to help with the appreciation and understanding of sciences in Puerto Rico throughout a series of podcasts, and to contribute with the dissemination of important information to help building careers in research. Currently, our website receives more than a million visits monthly.

[6] ¡Ciencia Boricua!:
Essays y Anecdotes of the Boricua Scientist.