

17 bird species in the Galapagos are at risk of extinction ^[1]

Submitted on 2 March 2013 - 2:56pm

This article is reproduced by CienciaPR with permission from the original source.

Calificación:

No

CienciaPR Contribution:

El Nuevo Día ^[2]

Original Source:

Agencia EFE

By:

Almost half of the Galapagos birds, 32% of plants and 90% of reptiles are cannot be found anywhere else in the world. (www.galapagosislands.com)

Quito - Scientists and governmental authorities of the Galapagos islands released a statement today calling on the international community to help protect several endemic bird species, including a "Darwin finch", which are being threatened by an invasive fly species.

The original news story is in Spanish. To read the full text, please click on the "Español" button below or the link at the top right of the page.

Tags:

- Galapagos [3]
- Conservation Science [4]

Content Categories:

- Environmental and agricultural sciences [5]

Source URL:<https://www.cienciapr.org/en/external-news/17-bird-species-galapagos-are-risk-extinction?language=en>

Links

[1] <https://www.cienciapr.org/en/external-news/17-bird-species-galapagos-are-risk-extinction?language=en> [2] <http://www.elnuevodia.com/en/peligrodeextincion17especiesdeavesenlasgalapagos-1460151.html> [3] <https://www.cienciapr.org/en/tags/galapagos?language=en> [4] <https://www.cienciapr.org/en/tags/conservation-science?language=en> [5] <https://www.cienciapr.org/en/categorias-de-contenido/environmental-and-agricultural-sciences-0?language=en>