The program will:
1. Identify, mentor, and help prepare a select group of high-potential, diverse, early-career individuals for professional success
2. Develop and sustain a community of researchers across generations committed to diversity and inclusion, who are willing to foster sustained attention to these issues in their research institutions and training programs

Eligible applicants must:
- Be a late-stage graduate student, postdoctoral fellow, or early-career researcher
- Be from an underrepresented group as defined by the National Institutes of Health guidelines
- Submit an abstract to the ASHG 2020 Annual Meeting by the June 11, 2020 deadline
- Complete application by June 11, 2020
- Be a United States citizen or permanent resident with legal status
